Art Unit: 1623

The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: page 1 of the specification fails to update the status of the parent application Serial. No. 10/132,005.

Appropriate correction is required.

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 87-93 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claims 87-93, as written, do not sufficiently distinguish over microorganisms as they exist naturally because the claims do not particularly point out any non-naturally occurring differences between the claimed products and the naturally occurring products. In the absence of the hand of man, the naturally occurring products are considered non-statutory subject matter. See Diamonds v. Chakrabarty, 447 U.S. 303, 206 USPQ 193 (1980).

Claim 23, 31, 33, 40, 41, 87-93, 99, 104 and 105 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. The terminology "mutant thereof" (all occurrences) lacks enablement in that it encompasses all possible mutants of the claimed microorganisms, including those which are not capable of producing antibiotics encompassed by the instant claims. It would take an undue experimentation by a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the instant invention was made to determine which specific mutants are capable of producing the desired antibiotics.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 87-93 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Michel et al (U.S. Patent No. 4,316,959) or Kamogashira et al (U.S. Patent No. 4,332,891).

Art Unit: 1623

Each of Michel et al and Kamogashira et al discloses a microorganism Streptomyces. The claimed microorganisms are anticipated by Michel et al and Kamogashira et al. In addition, if there are any differences between the claimed microorganisms and the references' microorganisms, the differences would appear to be minor in nature and the claimed microorganisms, which fall within the scope of the prior art's disclosure, would have been prima facie obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the instant invention was made.
